

Standing up for the dignity of patients and healthcare workers

We are counting down to our informational picket

Nurses and healthcare workers throughout our facility and at our sister hospital in Toppenish are standing up for our patients by taking action and sharing our message with the community. We can no longer be put in the position to cover for an employer who expects us to do our job with limited staffing and empty supply closets. Tomorrow is our picket and we have made the commitment to be there with our community and to call on Astria Health to do better for all of us: patients, healthcare workers, and our community.

Only together can we hold Astria accountable to the standard of patient care our community needs and deserves. We will be there with the support of elected leaders, community organizations, and other labor unions as we tell our community that we are there for them no matter what. Our hospital management must make that same commitment and invest in us and our patients instead of expecting staff to cover for their poor decisions. Be there with us as we show our commitment to our community and call on Astria to prioritize patient care.

"I love working at my hospital. My whole family has come here for years. I will be on the picket line because I want my facility to be the best place to receive care."

Celia Prada, Environmental Services Tech

"I am a small business owner and a union member. I know how important it is to value the people who work for me in order to provide my clients with a great service. Our hospital needs to show us the same respect and appreciation. We are essential to the care of patients and without us our hospital couldn't exist. It's time for Astria to step up and fulfill their commitment to frontline workers, patients and our community. I'll be on the picket line tomorrow because I believe in taking a stand for patient care."
